

WASHINGTON, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1908.

Johnson Repeats His Shut-Out Of the New York Americans

Comes Right Back and Blanks Them 6 to 0, Allowing But Four Hits—Tannehill III, Hughes and Keeley Have Lame Arms.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—It was another case of "Too Much Johnson" on the Hilltop here today, Washington easily winning by 6 to 0.

Cantillon, when he arrived in New York for the last series with Kid Elberfeld's kids, had a promising quartet of slabbers in Walter Johnson, Tom Hughes, Tannehill, and Keeley. The latter was taken ill on Friday, and today Hughes and Tannehill both complained of sore wings. As a consequence Cantillon had to fall back on Johnson, the willing one.

The Idaho wonder not only won his second game in two days from the Elberfeldians, but shut them out for the second successive time. Yesterday he disposed of the Highlanders on six hits. Today he adopted a policy of retrenchment and cut their supply of safe drives down to four. At any rate, should he pitch again Monday, the locals will more than likely quit with a brace of singles to their credit.

Two of Four More Flukes.

Two of the four safe drives made today were the merest of flukes.

Washington never allowed Manning to get set in the first inning. Manning could not get them anywhere near the plate for Pickering and the latter walked in consequence. Bob Ganley sacrificed Pickering to second. Unglaub lined a single to second, scoring Pick, and taking second on the throw to the plate. Delehanty followed this up with a triple to the score board in left field, scoring Unglaub, and a moment later came through with the third run on Clymer's one-sucker to center.

Manning was unceremoniously yanked out of the box by Elberfeld, Lake going on the mound. Lake signaled his appearance by a quick throw to Moriarty, catching Clymer dead asleep at first. Moriarty grabbed Freeman's high fly closing the inning. Pickering made a fence hit in the third inning, and before the ball was returned to the diamond Pick was on his way to the bench, having completed his home run.

A gift to Clymer, and a single by Freeman, and a Texas leaguer by Mc-

Bride gave the Statesmen another in the fourth chapter.

Washington's last tally was made in the ninth stanza. Unglaub singled to center and scored on Delehanty's double to left.

It was almost a procession between the plate and the field for the Highlanders, until the eighth inning when such excessive singles by Laporte and Moriarty put the former on third. This was as near as the locals came to scoring.

In spite of the fine weather and half holiday, a small crowd turned out for the fray, little interest being taken in the work of the tall enders of the American League.

Without any question Washington is lower in the American League standing than it should be. In about every contest it has played in New York this season, it has put up at least one hit, and it has kept in next to last place beyond the majority of fans. The Nationals mean to pass the Bostoners before the close of the season, and as every game counts these days they will strain every muscle to cop the New Yorkers in every game.

Wagner's Fierce Battle.

The second match, between J. R. Carpenter, Jr., and B. Wagner, was just as hotly contested as the Colston-Dewhurst match, and it was necessary to play thirty-eight games before the winner was decided. Wagner took the first set, 8-6, and in the second set Carpenter turned the tables on the opponent by winning, 7-5. The first set was not so close, but Colston stayed a little better of two, and finally won the set, 6-4, and the match.

Marines Fall Before "Bernie" Gallagher's Deceptive Slants.

FIELDING OF LOSERS
FACTOR IN OUTCOME

Fumbles and Frequent Muffs in Striking Contrast to Columbia's Classy Work.

"Bernie" Gallagher was too much for the Marines yesterday, and Columbia Athletic Club easily won its first game of the post-season amateur championship by 11 to 2.

Gallagher was in excellent form, holding the Marines, who have the reputation of being some sticklers, down to one hit in eight innings. In the ninth he eased up a little and the Marines drove two runs across the rubber.

Back of Gallagher the Columbia team played like veterans, only two errors being charged against them. Atchison was the bright particular star in the fielding line. The Capital City shortstop made a beautiful stop and throw of Berlick's hot grounder in the third, retiring the runner at first, and again in the sixth ran back of third to the stand and pulled down Bell's apparently safe Texas leaguer. In striking contrast to Columbia's good work, the Marines booted grounders and threw the ball away on the slightest provocation. Their erratic work in the field was responsible for the majority of Columbia's runs.

As it was, with better fielding, they were well in hand when he relieved Atkins after the first inning. Riter pitched well, but his support was scanty. In several instances, a number of Columbia's hits coming after the side should have been retired. His best work was in the seventh, when Hurley led off with a triple, but did not score.

Hurley Shows Class.

Hurley showed great class at the bat for the Columbia team. He poked out a triple to the score board and made three singles, scoring two runs himself and knocking in three others. Meagher was the only member of the Marines who found Gallagher consistently, making half of Texas's safeties.

Atkins started in to pitch for the Marines, but lasted only one inning. During his brief stay, the Capital City men put up a fine performance. Hurley started the game with a single between second and third and took second on Lay's sacrifice. With Hurley at bat, Hurley singled to center, sending in Taylor, and Atchison and Kinney tore off doubles to right. Atkins then hit Mullin and Smith, and O'Connor accommodated Hurley's second attempt in the first inning, letting him score two runs. Taylor, on his second attempt in the first inning, was hit by a batted ball, retiring the side.

Another in Fifth.

Columbia scored one more in the fifth on a hit by Hurley and Meagher's error, and two in the sixth on hits by Mullin and Smith and Ward's error. They ended their scoring in the eighth, two errors, a triple by Clear, and a single by Hurley scoring three runs.

Hits by Berlick, Downard and Meagher enabled the Marines to escape a shut-out in the ninth, two runs crossing the rubber.

Columbia Stacks Up

Against Grace.

Double-headers at both parks tomorrow beginning at 2:30. In the Class A, the Marines will meet Treasury in the first game, while Columbia Athletic Club will meet Grace in the second game.

In Class B, Twining will play Shopmen in the first game, while Eckington will clash with Nesco in the second.

By winning yesterday Treasury and Columbia are tied for first place in Section A, while Grace brings up in the rear with two defeats. Grace is by no means out of the running, although their chances are rather slim, but they may put one across on the leaders tomorrow. The Marines had an off day, and hope to be in form for a hard game with Treasury tomorrow. Riter, who has pitched both games for his team, will probably work tomorrow, as Manager Shurtleff's other fingers are not in shape.

Twining and Shopmen were the victors in Class B yesterday, and led the race in that section. They will play in the first game of the double-header tomorrow at Union Park, and a good contest should result. The results yesterday indicate that the race in Class B will be a close one. The Nescos are sure to make it interesting for the other teams, while Shopmen and Twining have shown great strength. Eckington is far from being weak, and will class up with any of the other teams.

LOUISVILLE FANS ARE NEARLY CRAZY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 5.—All records for attendance here were broken this afternoon when thousands of baseball fans saw Indianapolis beat Louisville, 1 to 0, in one of the greatest games ever played here. As early as 5 o'clock this morning the fans began to gather about the ticket offices.

The excitement is the result of the close race in the American Association.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Cleveland fielded poorly today, while the White Sox put up a strong game at the bat and in the field. Long hits by Walsh and Dougherty drove Joss off the slab in four innings. Falkenberg was hit hard in the sixth, and the Sox stole bases at will on Land, the new Cleveland catcher.

THE PLAYING IN BOTH GAMES WAS MARRED BY FREQUENT ERRORS, SOME OF WHICH WERE HARDLY EXCUSABLE EVEN WHEN MADE BY AMATEURS. BUT SEVERAL OF THE MISSES IN THE SECOND CONTEST WERE DUE TO THE WET BALL, FOR THE WHOLE OF THE SECOND GAME WAS PLAYED IN RAIN WHICH RANGED FROM A DRIZZLE TO A REAL DOWNPOUR AT TIMES.

Howard on the Job.

The superiority of Twining's fielding was evident in evidence to eke out a victory despite the fact that each side got the same number of hits. The backing-up of the winners was their best stunt and they were saved two runs in the third when McMahon threw wild to Sessler, but Howard was on the spot to grab the sphere, which was headed for deep left.

Another fielding was a double play in the fifth, when Haden made a difficult catch and landed it at first in time to head off McCarty. The game was replete with circus catches. The most sensational of these was that of Maddox in the tenth, when he grabbed Downey's liner. Two men were on bases and but one was out, when Downey's screecher looked good to make Twining's lead secure. The little center fielder ran back nearly to the fence after the fly thus giving his team an excellent chance to pull out of a hole in their half of the inning, which they failed to improve.

Gordon's coolness and ability to pull out of tight places was little short of sheer luck at times. In every session but two, Eckington had men left on bases and on six of these occasions, after issuing passes and allowing hits enough to let men on the bags, he pulled himself together and fanned the batter.

Eckington's Busy Session.

He veered a little too close to the wind in the second and eighth, and the sessions which were productive of all of Eckington's runs.

In the second, after fanning Sessler, he passed Murphy, who stole second and scored when Mace lined out a double. Another two-bagger tallied Mace, but McMahon was left after the next two up had fanned.

In the eighth two errors and two singles and a stolen base netted two more runs. Again Gordon fanned the last two men up.

Cleaver Base Running.

Cleaver base running almost pulled Eckington out of a hole in the eighth. Gordon fired the ball to first, but was too late to catch McMahon, while Mace

McQuillan Fails to Stop McGraw's Bunch of Heavy Hitters.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 5.—So far as the Phillies are concerned the New York Giants look like pennant winners right now.

A crowd of 14,881 fans saw the National League leaders hammer the Phillies' star twirler all over the lot at Broad and Huntington streets today, and win the second game of the series by 5 to 1.

Friday's crushing defeat, when Frank Sparks was batted out of the box in less than two innings, the loyal rooters of the Phillies' clan were still confident that McQuillan would put a check on the Giants' slugging, while Christy Mathewson was not nearly so much feared as Witte, the clever southpaw. But "Big Mac" failed to stop McGraw's bunch, and while he fared longer than Sparks, he was hit almost as hard and was finally driven to cover in the sixth, and Foxen finished the game. Manager Murray's young southpaw did not allow a run in the last three innings, and only one hit was made off him, but New York had more than enough runs to its credit to win long before this.

If Christy Mathewson was ever better than he was today, has never given an open display of his true form in this vicinity. The great twirler had everything at his command today, speed, control and perfect command of the situation from start to finish. Not one pass to first base did he issue during the nine innings and while the Phillies got two hits off him in the third and three in the sixth, these were the only innings they were able to bunch their drives with any degree of success and the sixth was the only inning productive of scoring and then it required in only a single tally.

Mathewson's task of beating the Phillies was not as easy as that of Witte on the previous day despite the hitting of teammates. One run was all that resulted in the first five innings. Retired, New York had scored four runs and the result of the contest beyond a reasonable doubt.

New York's inability to play the Phillies, for the latter put up a fast game in the field, but the weakness of Manager Murray's team, in the face of the brilliant pitching of the opposing pitcher, made the contest appear an unequal one, and the big crowd, which filled the stands and surged into the left field rope enclosure, causing ground rules to be adopted, had only a few opportunities to criticize.
